Artefact Enquiry

My Artefact was found in Sutton Hoo in 1939 by archaeologists. My artefact is a helmet, probably used by a warrior in battle. My helmet has two eye holes and two ear flaps. The helmet has lots of patterns engraved into the bronze metal. The helmet is almost like a real person's face. It has brows and beard. At the end of the eye brows there is the head of a snake. I think the snake head is a demon that they followed. Archaeologists think the helmet was mostly used for ceremonies because it was so big. The helmet has been bashed and some of the patterns have worn off.

Description

This helmet was found in 1939. In the wars the king might have worn the helmet. The place it was found in was Sutton Hoo. From the top of the head to the nose is a snake of gold. Around the eyes are small jewels. The archaeologists tried to put it back together. In the Saxon times it was all gold and beautiful but today it is all cracked and broken .
